Destined to become a new meeting place on the BYU campus is the fountain which is now playing at the east side of the newly-constructed Math building. The fountain consists of a central column of water with five plumes spraying into a deep pool from two sides. The fountain is illuminated at night with underwater floodlights, and passers-by have the opportunity to sit awhile on nearby benches to enjoy the aquatic spectacle.

New U.S. troop reduction creates a five-year low

SHON (UPI) A new troop reduction summed American forces in South Vietnam to 267,100 men—the lowest level in almost five years—was announced May by the U.S. command.

The war front, about 2,000 South

Vietnamese troops were lifted by helicopter to the northeastern rim of the A Shau Valley Sunday and Monday as part of a task force sweeping jungle areas east of the Laotian border. An American paratrooper was killed and four more wounded in the same area when Communists attacked a reconnaissance patrol. B-52 bombers continued attacking supply trails in the northwestern corner of South Vietnam.

The President's target for Dec. 1, under his Phase VII program is 184,000 troops in Vietnam. The command is now one-sixth toward meeting that figure and has more than seven months to send another 12,100 GIs home.

The command announced that 920 men have been ordered to stand-down status with an element of the American Division, the last complete U.S. division remain the largest in Vietnam, since it now numbers some 24,000 men—about 8,000 above normal division strength.

The command said 11,200 U.S. Marines are still in Vietnam, but 1,695 began preparations during the weekend to leave. Monday the 2,215 Marines from the Force Logistic Command went on stand-down.

The South Vietnamese hellish to the A Shau Valley was part of a 10,000-man task force trying to seal off the border with Cambodia. No immediate contact was made with the enemy.

A reconnaissance patrol of the U.S. 101st "Screaming Eagles" Airborne Division was attacked Sunday in the region. One American was killed and four wounded. Communist losses were unknown.

The U.S. Air Force B-52s flying out of Thailand dropped about 180 tons of bombs on supply trails in the northwestern area of South Vietnam in an attempt to prevent Communist infiltration behind the South Vietnamese in the A Shau.

Emergency currency action eases push on U.S. dollar

BONN (UPI) Emergency currency action by West European nations appeared yesterday to have eased the international monetary crisis. The U.S. dollar steadied during the day on some markets and the wholesale selling of dollars by speculators ended for the time being.

Devaluation in Austria dropped the dollar to its lowest point since the end of World War II and the "floating" of the West German mark had the effect of devaluating the dollar 3.75 per cent. But the dollar was firm in London, Paris and some other money centers.

Money speculators were reported holding back in West Germany, betting the market would be worth more in the next few days.

In Washington, the U.S. Treasury Department said it felt the international financial crisis was improving and "no immediate action" was planned. International banker Ezra Zilkha in New York said the emergency period was over although the "basic questions" remain unsolved. And Nobel Prize-winning economist Paul A. Samuelson in Cambridge, Mass., said the measures would restore "equilibrium" to European markets and should not be considered "an economic Pearl Harbor."

In West Germany, the crisis center, an expected immediate outflow of dollars failed to materialize on the first trading day since exchanges were closed Wednesday in Germany, Switzerland, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium.

The problem began last week as traders and speculators flooded West German banks with dollars considered overvalued against the healthy and prosperous mark. By purchasing marks and holding them, the speculators could clear a profit when trading them back to receive more dollars than originally invested if the dollar slipped in value.

But throughout the capitals of Europe Monday, trading was cautious. Observers felt many speculators were hoping the mark would rise to as much as 5 per cent or perhaps an official revaluation would be approved by the government.

To combat this and encourage an outflow of dollars, the German government decreed that dollar accounts can draw interest only with the approval of the Central Bank. Certain stocks and bonds also can be purchased only with approval of the Central Bank.

The key to the solution was handed West Germany after a weekend meeting of European Common Market in Brussels. The market gave permission for its six member nations to allow their currencies to float free of the dollar hoping to bridge the problem.

West Germany immediately set the mark afloat and Monday it climbed about 3.75 per cent to 3.525 marks for one U.S. dollar from the official parity of 3.65. But speculators felt the mark might increase as much as 5 per cent and force the government to backtrack on an earlier promise and revalue the official rate.

Mail service to cost more

"Will it actually be cheaper to phone than to write the folks back home?"

The United States Postal Service has raised postal rates which will go into effect May 16, according to Dee Brown, chief Postal postal clerk.

Regular letter rates will be raised to $0.08, post cards—$0.06, airmail and airmail postcards—$0.09.

Special delivery rates are going up to $6.00 and aerograms to $1.15. Overseas airmail price hikes will be released later.

Overseas third class printed matter will cost $0.08 for the first two ounces and $0.04 for each additional two ounces.

Books and sheet music mailed to South America, Canada, and Mexico will cost $1.18 for the first 12 ounces and $0.01 for each additional two ounces.

All other overseas mail will cost $1.18 for the first 12 ounces and $0.15 for each additional two ounces.

Came

Every Monday morning the electrostatic filters in the air conditioning unit of the Clark Library are automatically set to wash themselves clean of the accumulated debris. For some reason, one backed up yesterday, causing the drain to plug up and water to overflow onto the fourth floor. Aside from damage to some furniture, there was "no real damage," according to Donald Schmidt, a library official.

SWIMMING HOLE

Editor:
I have some suggestions which may be of help to the Physical Plant in its quest to beautify the campus. One needs special bright colors for the numerous pool houses which dot the Y's streets and parking lots—particularly notable is one large hole in the car lot north of the HFAC.

This corner, which has just finished getting from the recent rains, would make a lovely fishing spot if it were cleaned.

Think of some fun sport one could have as he tries to lure that bass, trout, or cat.

Or maybe like pond could be developed into a new swimming pool. All it would take is one diving board and several hundred feet of chain link fence to keep out those boisterous extramural students. I am thinking in terms of seven VWs, two Chevys, and a GMC school bus have been reported to have taken the plunge. Besides making quite an ugly splash, it might not be long before the pool fills and this scenic spot disappears.

I suppose I must also mention a third possibility, just for completeness' sake and also to please those death-of-the-party types. The holes could be filled in with asphalt, but then we would be without a fish pond or another swimming pool. Wouldn't we?

BICYCLISTS

Editor:
Spring has sprung, the grass has grown, and the little mice grow, but that is still no excuse for those who own bicycles to operate them in the lanes of student traffic. The sidewalks should be specific, during class break or where posted.

According to the pamphlet,

Combined Brigham Young University and Provo City Bicycle Regulations, on page 4, the fine for riding them in the lanes is $25.00. The fine for failure to obey the signs prohibiting bike riding, specifically on the ramps connecting the campus with Helaman Hills and the Fieldhouse, is $1. This particular ramp has registered their bikes so when they do ride the walks at class break they knowingly violate the rules—in this case ignorance is no excuse because it is their responsibility to know the rules and to respect the rights of others on this campus, not the pedestrian's responsibility to dodge the weaving bikes as they careen down the ramp.

An administration to stop "the useless slaughter on our highways," the highways meant for our feet, would be to copy the BYU bicycle registration number off of the little blue metal tag, and make it a key to the gates of security. If security has done their job and given tickets to all those who have failed to register (a fine of $1), the situation will correct itself.

It is legal, however, to ride bicycles on the sidewalks, but not between classes.

OCHOTOMY

Editor:
At one point in his "Wealth of Nations," Adam Smith advises us on our personal economic habits. In essence, he says: If you require the services of a certain man, it is not necessary to pay him a sum of money, "humanity," i.e., to his desire to help others. Indeed, he may not even harbor such a desire. Rather, you should appeal to his self-interest, i.e., to his desire to receive payment. Once you have done this, his service to you will benefit himself well beyond most readily. This belief is often called "enlightened self-interest," and it forms the basis of modern economics.

Many people in the Church espouse the teachings of enlightened self-interest with such religious fervor that one is almost tempted to take it for a revelation from God. Let me briefly analyze the motives behind the actions of God in His work here in the world, and in modern capitalism. If God were a capitalist, He would never fear for the immortality of man but for the immortality of His own soul. Each time He creates a new soul, He pondered, "Is there in it for me?" That's when Christ suffered us the fruits of the resurrection by dying on the cross; the accomplishment would have been contingent and nonessential. What would have been essential is that He would have been for himself the right to an immortal body.

I am confident that all Christians would reject out of hand such a view of God. Yet, in the secular affairs of most Christians, enlightened self-interest can be seen every day as the relationships between religion and economics were as two mutually exclusive spheres, each operating on a distinct set of principles. I am not at all sure that the answer lies in the principles of this dichotomy. Certainly socialism and Marxism-Leninism are not the answer. Furthermore, I know that violence is not the appropriate means, for Christ is the Prince of peace. The answer lies in the love of Jesus Christ less the answer. We must not be afraid to search, and when we find, to act—even at the expense of unsettling the calm of the status quo.

VANDALISM

Editor:
Today's conversation is often centered on dress standards and the honor code. But the article consists of mostly the lack of both of these or the absence of boards. What about the abuse of library books?

Tonight I searched for information on a selected writing upon books. In the article, wrote, "from 11 possible sources, naturally, over one-half of the sources did not contain the needed information. But there were several that did; for instance, four articles did not mention fact. But, there was some unknown person, part of two of the articles were actually cut out of the book."

Stepping into the other person's shoes for just a moment, many students are, I suspect, reluctantly coerced for insights into this unexplored topic. Possibly time was running short and note-taking proved too time-consuming. He might have been shown on more than one occasion that students are, and could not afford a few nickels to have the material machine copied. But that is no excuse for abusing an invaluable reference book. And it is certainly inconsiderate toward others who may follow him in the quest of the same information.

Frightening that this letter cannot undo the harm that has been done, I write as an outlet for my personal thoughts, and, in hopes that it might be some way bring about the restraint of such thoughtless acts.

Question...

Editor:

Being two starving graduate students, we were appalled to realize in every year a quarter of a million dollars is wilfully squandered by a group of leaders elected by the vote of only 23 per cent of the entire student body. Perhaps we are pitifully naive in a world of high finance, but to us this money seems like a small fortune. Bro. David B. Haig recently pleaded for student support in order to finance BYU.

Why not abolish student government, especially in view of the fact that this is a private institution? Instead, two student representatives could be placed on the Board of Trustees—one representing the majority and one the minority—thereby making students more aware of the real issues, and allowing our money to go to other more pressing needs. Some of these could be:

1) every four years a new building costing a million dollars could be erected.

2) the Administration could perhaps lower, instead of raising, tuition for a change.

3) scholarships could be offered to those in real need.

4) expansion of the library and better study conditions could be effected.

5) more lucrative salaries could be used to attract other highly-qualified teachers.

Plans for the new BYU Industrial Park are in the final stages of preparation. The plans are bringing into a Provo area what independent industries are naturally compatible with each other and with the soil and resources of the community.

The industry will be able to live within a pre-planned zone on a plot of land suited to its own needs and which is more easily landscaped in conjunction with each of the industrial sites in the park for the mutual economic benefit of the industries as well as the community as a whole.

DAUSE OF THE carefully planned landscaping of the entire complex, it will have the appearance of a park, hence the name Industrial Park.

At present, the industrial area involved in 1968 was U.S. $10 million. The industrial complex, now completed, totals 386 acres of land between Provo and Orem with the stipulation that it be developed into an industrial park.

"Development of the park," according to the office of Industrial Park development, "will result in improved economic conditions to the entire state, besides bringing revenue to BYU and job opportunities to BYU students."

THE OLD steel plant was dismantled (scheduled to be done by the first part of May), workers have been studying the ground water conditions on the site. Underground artesian surface water and some streams contribute to the drainage problem. A network of wells and canals is planned to solve drainage and contribute to landscape as well.

Under study are the road network, railroad system and air access. Provo is considered a good location for an industrial park because of the natural resources in the area, availability of labor and because it is at a central location of all major western markets ranging from San Francisco, Los Angeles, Seattle, Portland, Denver and Phoenix.

MOTHER'S DAY, according to Bell Telephone Co., is the second best day of the year for long distance calls. It is even said that people call on Mother's Day more than any other day.

LDS history symposium to explore latest findings

Seven well-known historical researchers will present their latest findings at a symposium on Mormon History at BYU Saturday.

The symposium will begin at 9 a.m. in the HFAC de Jong Concert Hall with a welcome by Dr. Truman G. Madsen, director of the BYU Institute of Mormon Studies.

Each presentation will be approximately 40 minutes with time for questions and answers.

Dr. Milton V. Backman of the BYU Institute for Mormon Studies will lecture at 9:15 a.m. on "The Mormons in the Burnside River District." Dr. Backman is the author of two volumes on American religious history and has received two fellowships for researching materials of early Mormon origins. He is presently working on a history of the Campbellite movement in Ohio.

"The Future of the Mormon Past" will be discussed at 10 a.m. by Dr. Richard L. Anderson, professor of history and religious education at BYU. He received his degrees from Harvard and Berkeley in law, classical history, and language.

At 11 a.m. Davis Bitton, professor of history at the University of Utah, author of two volumes of history, and president of the Mormon History Association, will speak on "Mormon Disraeli: Problems of Their Use by Historians."

Author of "Religious History of America" and as "Historical Atlas of Religion in America," Professor Edwin S. Gossow will speak at the noon luncheon in 396 ELWC. His topic will be "Religion in the Groves of Academe." He is professor of religious history at the University of California.

Dr. Leonard J. Arrington, professor of economics at Utah State University, will speak at 1:30 p.m. on "Centrifugal Tendencies in Mormon History." The author of some 200 articles, he is presently working on a one-volume history of the Mormons.

Dr. Robert L. Layton, professor of geography at BYU, will talk on "Geography Persists in Early Mormon History" at 2:30 p.m. He recently completed an article for "BYU Studies," which tells how the early Mormons saw and responded to their physical surroundings.

"LDS Scriptures as Expressive of a Doctrine of Propositional Revelation" will be the topic of a 3:30 p.m. address by Richard P. Howard.

History prof. receives grant

One of 70 Fulbright grants awarded in the world for study in Germany every year has been given to Professor C. Russell Jensen of the BYU Dept. of History.

He will conduct research at the University of Freiburg to determine the "Influence of the American Civil War Upon German Military Strategy." He will attempt to find out how many of the battle plans and campaigns of the American Civil War the Germans used in the Franco-Prussian War and World War I.

His study and research will be conducted mainly in German in the Archiv at the University of Freiburg and Frankfurt. He reads and speaks fluent German. He served an LDS mission to Austria, ministered in German in school, and his wife is German.

The prestigious grant amounts to 9,000 German marks and will allow him to study in Southern Germany for one year. He and his wife will leave in September.

Report Arab newsmen

Chou En-lai ready to negotiate with U.S.

BEIRUT (UPI) — The Beirut newspaper Al Kifah said yesterday Chou En-lai, Chinese premier, told visiting Arab newsmen in Peking he is ready to open negotiations with the United States on world problems.

He said the negotiations should begin with the question of Nationalist China.

Publishing remarks made by Chou to Sinhua, a news agency, the newspaper said the premier warned the United States against getting involved in a war with Communist China.

"The United States will never be able to get out of China," Chou said.

The paper said Chou predicted further improvement in relations between the "Chinese and American people," and said he was ready for negotiations with the United States on world problems beginning with Taiwan. The main problem between Communist China and the United States is the "occupation of Taiwan and its Straits by imperialist forces," the newspaper said. Chou as saying.

The Nationalist Chinese regime of Chiang Kai-shek, recognized by the United States, took power in Taiwan in 1949 with a vow to return to the mainland.

"Changes have taken place which have affected Chinese American relations during the past two years," Chou was quoted as saying. "I believe that relations between the Chinese and American peoples will develop further."

On the Middle East, Chou said, "Unity is the key to victory for the Palestinians and the Arabs remain firm in their will, victory will be theirs," Al Kifah reported.

Conservationist fears for national bird's life

MOOSE, Wyo. (UPI) — A Wyoming conservationist, alarmed about the recent discovery of 15 dead eagles in rugged and desolate canyon country near Casper, warned Sunday the nation's national bird may be extinct by the end of the century.

"We feel we have a good chance of saving the bald eagle," said John F. Turner. "We are losing the young birds and when the older ones give out, there are none to replace them."

"And the bad thing is, I don't see any reversing trend," he continued.

Eleven of the 15 eagles found in Jackson Canyon last week were bald eagles and the other four were golden eagles. Both species are protected by federal law. Turner said they may have eaten poisoned ball left by sheep ranchers for grizzlies.

Recently, the golden eagles were found shot down 90 miles to the southwest near Rawlins two months ago and Turner believes they may have been shot down from planes.

The remains of the eagles found in Jackson Canyon have been sent to the Federal Fish and Wildlife Service Laboratory in Laurel, Md., for study.

Nixon attacked on civil rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The chairman of the U.S. Civil Rights Commission said yesterday that America could become "a divided nation with all kinds of civil disorders" unless President Nixon can lead the nation to a new commitment to equal civil rights for all citizens.

T. Ross Theodore M. Hesburgh, president of Notre Dame University and chairman of the six-member commission, made his remarks at a news conference. He reported that the commission found little improvement and some backsliding in government civil rights enforcement over the past seven months.

Finding little improvement since it issued its report Oct. 12, 1970, that bureaucratic inertia and hostility threatened to nullify civil rights laws, Hesburgh told reporters. "I see happening a divided nation. I see happening all kinds of civil disorders, hypocrisy that we say one thing and do another, frustration that the government doesn't follow the law."

As for President Nixon's role, Hesburgh said, "Going alone with presidential leadership, you have to have presidential follow-through. I suspect there is a feeling throughout the nation that unless we have bombings and violence, people forget and tend to fall back to sleep again."

"It's been said that people get the government they deserve. But we need a total moral reawakening to the problem of the minorities," Hesburgh added.

Lauds shotless roundup

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Attorney General John N. Mitchell yesterday called last week's violent antiwar demonstrations in the nation's capital "an organized attempt by thousands of lawbreakers to deny other Americans their civil rights." He said the demonstration was an "utter failure."

Mitchell said Washington police, in making some 12,000 arrests without firing a shot, "presented to the world a picture of police fairness and effectiveness."

He told the 51st conference of the California Peace Officers' Association he hoped the Washington example would be followed by other cities.

If so, he said, "we will see an end to the extremist practice of running roughshod over the rights of others."

Mitchell said President Nixon fully shared his sentiments.

"I am proud of the Washington city police," he said. "I am proud that they stopped a repressive mob from robbing the rights of others."

Oscar winner to teach here

Academy Award-winning actor Karl Malden is scheduled to bring his acting and directing talents to the BYU Drama Dept. this summer.

Malden, who won his first Oscar in 1951 in "A Streetcar Named Desire" with Marlon Brando, will be on the BYU campus during the first five weeks of Summer School.

His most recent film role was General Omar Bradley in the 1970 Academy Award-winning motion picture "Patton," in which he co-starred with George C. Scott.

Malden will be working with Dr. Charles Metten of the BYU Drama Dept. in teaching a special master-acting class. He also will direct and narrate an evening of plays which has collected, and conduct an open seminar for theater majors.

While at BYU, Malden will direct a series of scenes which he has selected from great American plays. He said that working with college theater students is one of the most rewarding and stimulating experiences of his professional life.

Students accepted into his master-acting class will be chosen by audition only. Each student must audition with a comedy and serious dramatic scene.

Malden's acting and directing talent has made him not only popular with movie-goers, but has also gained him great respect from other Hollywood performers.

The actor has tackled very difficult roles with great versatility and strength of characterization which has made one producer call Malden "a kind of all-legged insurance policy for your picture."

Malden has starred with such Hollywood notables as Marlon Brando, Gary Cooper, Rosalind Russell, John Ford and Spencer Tracy.

His versatility came into full display during the filming of Warner Brother's picture, "The Hanging Tree." During filming the director fell ill, and Malden stepped in and completed the film.

Richard Widmark also came under Malden's direction in "Time Limit," which won much acclaim from critics.

Malden has been described as an "actor who brings an ultimate measure of truth and integrity to his every performance—no matter how implausible the story may be."

Besides the current popular film "Patton," he is seen in "On the Waterfront," "The Hanging Tree," "Birdman of Alcatraz," "Gypsy," "Cheyenne Autumn," "Pollyanna," and "How the West Was Won."

Trumpeters in recital

Trumpeter Bruce Barnes and Bryan Tobiak will give their joint senior recital today at 4:15 p.m. in the HFAC Madson Recital Hall.

The pair, students of Newell Dayley, will alternate in a variety of music from the Baroque to the present.

Academy Award-winning actor Karl Malden, recently a star in "Patton," is scheduled to teach drama at BYU this summer.

'Hi-Lights in Culture' given

"Hi-Lights in Culture," a musical featuring 300 Utah Valley talents in song and dance, will be presented at the HFAC Pardoe Drama Theatre May 20 at 7:30 p.m., May 21 at 3:30 p.m., and May 22 at 10 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

Produced by the BYU Speech and Drama Dept. under Dr. Charles Henson, the show will include highlights from other productions of choreographer-director, Colleen Collins Smith. These include "Cavalcade," "Kismet," "Elmer Gantry," "South Lake," "Never say Never," "Wizard of Oz," and "Tribute to Walt Disney."

This marks the 25th year that Mrs. Smith has been directing and choreographing productions in both Utah Valley and in Hollywood.

Oratorio, Symphony play Mass

A special arrangement of the march from Berlioz's "Damnation of Faust" will open the second half of the program. Dr. Ralph Laycock will also conduct the Wind Symphony in "Mazeppa," Improvisation and Romance by BYU composer-in-residence Merrill Bradshaw, and "American Suite for Band" by Mutcher.

Dr. John R. Halliday will conduct the two groups in the major work of the evening, Bruckner's "Mass in E minor."

By JIM LINDSEY

"We had to make some adjustments in the defense," remarked Coach John Segar, "and our reshuffled lineup more than met the challenge and responded with a real strong game."

And the BYU ruggers more than responded as they rolled over visiting Colorado State, 20-9, Saturday.

BYU's scoring machine jumped into a quick lead as Sasa Paongo converted a 35-yard penalty kick four minutes into the game. Three minutes later, speedster Brian Andelin scored on his down-the-field-a-slammed kick from Keith Fowler to widen the Cat margin to 6-0. Midway through the first half, back captain Jim Riri grabbed an outlet pass from Keith Pickett following a second effort penetration by Bob Blazer.

The half ended with the Cougars leading, 14-3, on a 25-yard scoring sprint by Andelin and a last minute score by CSU.

The second half settled into a real seesaw battle with both sides trading two. Displaying their heads-up play, forward Gubler stole the ball from a CSU player and raced 20 yards before passing out to Paongo, who bulldozed his way in for the score.

With ten minutes remaining in the game, BYU's final tally came as fullback Mike Mahukua pulled down a low CSU kick. He then

Frisbee: P.E. 801?

By DALE VAN ATTA
Staff Writer

It is late afternoon at Helman Hall. The sun is about to rest on its Western couch for a night as several of the residents of Chapman Hall head out to the grassy area in front of the halls.

In hand, one student carries a light polyethylene disk about the size of a pie pan. Once all are in their positions, the sport begins with the disk soaring, dipping, and banking much like a glider.

It's Frisbee time.

At colleges and universities throughout the country, on beaches, in back yards, tucked into hiking backpacks, and even featured in last month's hunger walk, the country is the game of "Frisbeans."

In stores report sell-outs of these items, and one newspaper states that some reasons may be as follows: "For the frustrated jock (athlete), it's an outlet; for the freshman coed, it's a mixer; for the stores, it's a gold mine."

Frisbee, in its present form, first came onto the market about 12 years ago from Wham-O Manufacturing Co., the organization that set a trend for fads when it gave the world Hula Hoops.

Enthusiasts of this disk sport claim many reasons for its popularity. It's cheap, they say. A Frisbee can be bought at any dime store for as little as 90 cents, while the most expensive model is $3. According to Wham-O, several million have been sold.

It requires a high physical conditioning as a basic skill of chess and necessitates no large open spaces. Not only has Frisbee been seen in the parks of Provo, but in the halls of higher learning.

There's even an International Frisbee Association having 28,000 members, including Dr. Stancil Johnson, the official Frisbee historian. A long-haired, prematurely gray haired, and slightly balding man, Johnson is currently working on a scholarly book about Frisbee.

The history of Frisbee, he asserts, is very cloudy one. One group of historians contends that the statue of the famed Greek athlete Discobolus was, in reality, a man with a Frisbee.

Some people credit the late Joseph F. Frisbee, owner of the Frisbee Pic Co. of Bridgeport, Conn., as the inventor of the disk after drivers of the company flew pie plates as a sport.

Another version holds that a 19th century Yale scholar, Elihu Frisbee, revolted against the passing of the collection plate in the chapel by seizing the platter and sailing merrily in the general direction of the university quad.

Whatever its history or origin, Frisbee, for sure, has taken hold not only as an amateur sport but, in some cases, as a very serious professional game.

Johnson himself is acknowledged, according to Sports Illustrated, to have the most wicked forehand in the game—hard to control and even harder to catch. Most players throw right.

During the summer there is a national Frisbee championship and competition for the Julius Nachazel Memorial Trophy. The award is an old tin cup.

Nachazel is a somewhat shadowy figure. He reportedly showed up at a tournament, chased an errant disc into the woods and was never seen again.

Competition also has its pitfalls. Contestants run the risk of Freshman Dee Andrews, known by gamblers as "the boy with the magnetic hand (for catching) and rubberman wrist (for throwing)," makes one of the few misses of his disk-colored career. "I feel bad about it," he muttered. Photo by Robert Allen incurring the dreaded "Frisbee finger," an injury which occurs from making a catch in the wrong angle.

Frisbee competition includes contests for distance and accuracy. There is also a game called "guts Frisbee." It's played by two five-man teams standing about 15 yards apart. They hurl the plastic discs at each other with the greatest possible force, scoring points when an opponent fails to catch a throw one-handed.

Thor Anderson, an investigator for the U.S. Department of Labor in Washington, D.C., is feared as the toughest of the "guts Frisbee" competitors. He is respected for his overhand reverse wrist flip implications."

A graduate student in physics at Brigham Young University is the holder of the world's distance Frisbee record. He has tossed the disk 70 yards.

Other games developed by players include Frisbee football and Frisbee golf.

The Wall Street Journal reports Frisbee to be one of Richard Burton's favorite forms of exercise. Other movie stars like John Andrews, Gregory Peck and Fred Ward may play disc golf.

In fact, movie people claim the Frisbee idea was started in Hollywood during the 1940s when film editors relaxed at lunch by tossing empty film cans.

Soldiers in Vietnam have found recreation tossing Frisbees after a day in the bush tossing grenades at the Viet Cong. Last week, at Moscow's Institute of American Studies, Columbia University scholar Marshall Shulman, and Russian physicist Mikhail Lomnitschikov were spotted tossing the Frisbee. "It was a striking example of peaceful coexistence," said Time magazine, which reported the incident.

Recently, at the University of Oregon, more than 100 faculty and administrators participated in a Frisbee rally to protest the removing of credits from a course titled "Frisbee Techniques and Spatial Implications."

Taxpayers had complained the course was frivolous. The class, now in session without academic credit, is part of a program called SEARCH, an innovative group of student-initiated courses outside the regular university curriculum. The courses catalog description reads:

"Frisbee space requirements and demonstration of Frisbee recreational potentials and the activities it supports; the social interaction and artistic implications inherent to the sport. Unlimited enrollment; no prerequisites."

Who knows? Someday Frisbee may become a BYU course, something along the lines of P.E. 801.

Known to some as the "Frisbee Kid," freshman Bob Romney catches the disk one-handed, a feat which only the proficient can perform. He is known for "doing" anything to catch the Frisbee, which may include somersaults and handstands.
